The first Saturday in April is set for the choice of delegates to represent the Democratic convention to nominate candidates for the various county offices. The results are anticipated and worked for with intense interest. Aspirants abound for the several places to be filled. A. S. Death of Major Chas. Pickett.

Maj. Chas. Pickett died at his home in Norfolk, last Saturday night, after an illness of several weeks. Major Pickett had long been one of the most prominent citizens of Norfolk. He was orn in Richmond fifty-nine years ago. He was a brother of the famous Gen. Pickett, of the Confederate Army, who led the famous charge at Gettysburg On his brother's staff he served as a Major, and for a time he was Adjutant General of Pickett's division. In these capacities he served gallantly throughout the war, being badly wounded at one time. Since the war Major Pickett had lived almost continuously in Norfolk, in whose material development he had always taken the deepest interest. For many years he had been Secretary of the Business Men's Association, and since the consolidation of that organization with the Chamter of Commerce and Merchants' and Manufacturers' Association he had retained ly Father, in the exercise of His sov-ereign will to remove from us by death, on the 15th day of February, 1899, our beloved sister, Mrs Anne M.
